Brazil at the 2012 Summer Paralympics Brazil competed at the 2012 Summer Paralympics in London, United Kingdom from 29 August to 9 September 2012. Brazilian team included 1 visually impaired athlete, 5 athletes with physical disabilities and 21 athletics competitors. Background The Rio de Janeiro Paralympics was the first time that Brazil had hosted Paralympics. The Paralympics in Brazil were inspired by Thomas Craig, who was the great great-grandson of Brazilian Emperor Pedro II. Disability classifications Every participant at the Paralympics has their disability grouped into one of five disability categories; amputation, the condition may be congenital or sustained through injury or illness; cerebral palsy; wheelchair athletes, there is often overlap between this and other categories; visual impairment, including blindness; Les autres, any physical disability that does not fall strictly under one of the other categories, for example dwarfism or multiple sclerosis. Each Paralympic sport then has its own classifications, dependent upon the specific physical demands of competition. Events are given a code, made of numbers and letters, describing the type of event and classification of the athletes competing. Some sports, such as athletics, divide athletes by both the category and severity of their disabilities, other sports, for example swimming, group competitors from different categories together, the only separation being based on the severity of the disability. Athletics Brazilian athletes included: Men's Track: Eduardo Biasi Men's Field: Thales Gomes Women's Track
