dr. rizal did not want to write about the philippines, or anything about the philippines, or anything about the philippines. he did not write about spanish policy in the philippines. he wrote about what he considered to be the only solution to the problems of the philippine islands, namely separation from spain. he did not write about the many abuses and injustices of spain. he wrote about the only hope for the philippines, and for the world, namely separation from spain. he thought that this was the only solution to the problems of the philippines. he offered this solution, and the history of his efforts to bring it about, in his books: noli me tangere and el filibusterismo. when, in june of 1896, spanish troops landed at iloilo, rizal returned to the philippines. he was arrested in september of 1896. he was tried in december of 1896, and executed in january of 1897. he was 56 years of age. in december of 1896, the spanish government, and the american government, had formed a treaty whereby spain gave up its authority over the philippines in exchange for $20 million and no more war. the filipinos of mindanao did not want any part of this treaty. it was not what they wanted at all. they wanted to have their own rule and authority. there was a terrible amount of injustice done to the filipinos of mindanao. the spanish troops, who came to restore order, and to put the filipinos under the authority of spain, behaved badly to the natives. this is what rizal is referring to in his books noli me tangere and el filibusterismo. he thought that the only way to bring about the desired separation of the philippines from spain was to have filipinos of all races and creeds, organized under the authority of a philippine republic, demanding only separation from spain, and demanding only self government.
